INVESTIGATION OF ACTIVITY OF GERMAN AGENTS IN U. 8 Invitation to Hyphenated Citizens
Get Off the Earth.

New York, Jan. 6.—An invitation to "hyphenated citizens," who put the interests of their native country before those of America, to "get off the face of the earth," was issued here today by United States Judge Henry D. Clayton of Alabama. Judge Clayton's remarks were made in addressing the grand jury which was empanelled to resume the investigation into the activity of Garman agents in this country.

resume the investigation into the activity of Garman agents in this country.

"You gautlemen," he said, "are entering upon your duties as American citizens. If any of you have had the misfortune to be born in a foreign country, I hope that you can truthfully say now that you love America more than the land of your birth. I have no sympathy with any naturalized citizen who is given to carping criticism of his government, or who cannot say that he loves America fist, last and forever. If any citizen has come here from another country to svade military service, let him not criticize our institutions here. If he desires to do so let him get off the face of the earth or go back and fight for the country whence he came.

"We do not care what foreigners or toreign nations think of our methods of sovernment. So far they have proven preeminently successful. At present we are doing our best to carry out the precepts of the great father of our country. George Washington, by keeping our minds strictly on our own business and avoiding entangling alliances or by meddling in the affairs of Eurepean nations."

The grand furors will continue the inquiry into strikes in munitions plants and explosions in factories and ship yards, which has already resulted in the indictment of Congressman Frank Buchanan of Illinois and seven others.

The handling of the masses of troops within a limited area probably was the most complicated ever undertaken and military men are not surprised that some important details failed to work as planned.

The Suvia Bay landing failed to accomplish its object, the report shows partly because the force consisted argely of untried troops, under generals inexperienced in the new warrare and partly through the failure of the water auxoly. of the water supply.

The sufferings of the troops for lack of water make painful reading.

of water make painful reading.

Praises Bravery of Men.

Gensral Hamilton bestows the highest possible praise upon the bravery of the men. He believes that after the middle of August the Turks outnumbered the British and had plenty of tresh soldiers and munitions while the British government was unable to furnish him with the reinforcements he wanted.

wanted.

The general strongly opposed the abandonment of any of the bases held by the British troops.

General Hamilton's report, which was submitted to Field Marshal Earl Kitchener, secretary of state for war, carries the story of the Dardanelles operations up to mid-October, when he relinquished his command. Concerning his retirement, General Hamilton reports:

"On the 1th of October, your lordship cabled askins me for an estimate of the losses which would be involved in the evacuation of the peninsula. I replied in terms showing that such a step was to me unthinkable. On the 16th of October I received a cable recalling me to London for the resson, I was informed by your lordship on my arrival, that His Majesty's government desired fresh, unbiased opinion from a responsible commander, on the question of early evacuation."

The most stirring passages of the

The most stirring passages of the document described the fil-fated landing at Suvia Bay and Anzac early in August for securing command of the heights on the middle of the penin-sula and cutting off from their base the Turkish forces at the lower ex-tremity where the allied armies made their first landing.

Climax of Operations. This operation began on August 6th,
The climax was reached at daybreak on the 10th, when the Turks made a grand attack from the summit of Chunnuk Bair Hill, upon a short front held by two battailons of the Sixth North Lancashire and the Fifth Wiltshire regiments which General Hamilton describes as weakened in numbers though not in snirit ton describes as weakened in numbers, though not in spirit.

"First our men were shelled by every enemy gun," he says, "then assaulted by a huge column consisting of no less than a full division plus three battalions. The North Lancashire men were simply overwhelmed in their shallow trenches by sheer weight of numbers, while the Wiltshires, who were caught out in the open, were literally almost annihilated.

Ponderous Mass of Enemy. "The ponderous mass of the enemy swept over the crest and swarmed round the Hampshires and General Baldwin's brigade, which had to give ground, and were only extricated with ground, and were only extricated with great difficulty and very heavy losses. "Now it was our turn. The warships and the New Zealand and Australian artillery, Indian mountain artillery brigade and the 69th brigade, Royal Field artillery, were getting the chance of a lifetime. As successive solid lines of Turks topped the crest of the ridge, gaps were torn through their formation and an iron rain fell on them as they tried to re-form in the guillies. they tried to re-form in the gullies.

Turks Paid Dearly for Recapture. "Not here only did the Turks pay ress Monroe. There on the night before the battle he was invited by an officer of the Monitor to be his valet and he accepted, going aboard the vessel.

What happened during the time the vessels pounded each other in the famous fight is still clear in Mr. Taylor's mind. He even quotes some of the vester slopes of Chunnuk Bair as if determined to gain everything they had lost. But once they were they are they become exceed they become averaged. over the crest they became exposed not only to the full blast of the guns, naval and military, but a battery of ten New Zealand machine guns, which played upon their serried ranks at close range until their barrels were red hot.

"Enormous losses were inflicted and of the swarms which had once fairly crossed the crest line only a handful ever straggled back to their own side of Chunnk Bair.

Climax of Deadly Conflict. "At the same time, strong forces of the enemy were hurled against the spurs to the northeast where there arose a conflict so deadly that it may be considered the climax of four days' fighting for the ridge. Portions of our line were plerced and the troops were driven clean down the hill. At the driven clean down the hill. At the foot of the hill the men who were supervising the transpert of food and water were rallied by Staff Captain Street. Unhesitatingly, they followed him back, where they lunged again into the midst of that series of struggles, in which generals fought in the ranks and men dropped their scientific weapons and caught one another by the throat.

Many Deeds of Daring.

Many Deeds of Daring.

"The Turks came on again and again. Fighting magnificently and calling upon the name of God, our men stood to it and maintained by many a deed of daring the old traditions of their race. There was no flinching; they died in the ranks where they stood. Here Generals Cayley, Baldwin and Cooper and all their gallant men achieved great glory. On this bloody field fell Brigadler General Baldwin, who earned his first laurels on Caesar's camp at Ladysmith. There, too, fell Brigadler General Cooper, badly wounded.

No Live Turks Left.

No Live Turks Left. "Toward this supreme struggle the absolute last two battalions from the general reserve were now hurried, but by 10 in the morning the effort of the enemy was spent. Soon their shattered remnants began to trickle back, leaving a track of corpses behind them. By night, except for prisoners or wounded, no live Turk was left on our side of the slope."

Two lesser attacks were made by the Turks the same day. General Hamilton continues:

Terrific Losses Sustained.

Terrific Losses Sustained

"By evening the total casualties of General Birdwood's force had reached 12,000 and included a very large proportion of officers. The Thirteenth division of the new army, under Major General Shaw, had alone lost 6,000 out of a grand total of 10,500. Brigadier General Baldwin was gone and all his staff men and commanding officers, thirteen, had disappeared from the fighting effectives. The Warwicks and Worcesters had lost literally every single officer.

Worcesters had lost literally every single officer.

"The old German notion that no unit could stand the loss of more than 25 per cent, has been completely falsified. The Thirteenth division and the Twenty-ninth brigade of the Tenth Irish division had lost more than twice that, and in spirit were game for as much more fighting as might be required."

The British had held all they gained except two important sallents, one a hill, momentarily carried by the Gurkhas, and the position on Chunnuk Bair, which had been retained forty-sight hours.

AMERICAN PRODUCTIVITY Great Strides Made in Dyestuffs and Tin Plate Manufacture.

New York, Jan. 6.—The facility with which industrial America has taken up the manufacturing paralyzed by the European war wies especial reference to the great strides in dyestuffs and tin plate production, was peviewed by William C. Redfield, secretary of commerce in an address before the officers and directors of the American International corpors on today.

American International corporation.

The secretary was the guest of honor at a luncheon given by the officers of the corporation, which two months ago took over ships of the Pacific Mail Steamship company and put them under the American flag.

The United States in the next few years will be producing 20,000 tons of dyes annually instead of 1,000 tons, the secretary said.

"Germany always claimed she was the only country that had the right kind of clays with which to make chemicals," he said. "We have a greater varity of clays in this country and now we have discovered as good clay, if not better, than can be found anywhere in the world."

Mr. Redfield declared that the United States has captured several industries from Europe. The jin plate milling business has been won from London, he said and manufacture of that product has been proceeding on a large scale at Bayonne, N. J., for the last month. He also referred to the fur industry and said that seal-skins are now being treated in St. Louis by sixteen experts brought to this country from London.

The labor congress was in many ways the most important body of the kind ever assembled. More than 1,000 delegates were present, representing four hundred unions and three million four hundred unions and three million workers.

In addition to the formal vete against the government's compulsion bill, the congress rejected by four to one a motion pledging support of the people of the compulsion act for single men, and passed, by two to one, another motion directing the labor party to oppose the bill in all its stages in the house of commons.

The congress closed with an enthusiastic scene, the feature of which was the singing of the socialist anthem, "The Red Flag," by some of the delegates.
